The DC Commission on the Arts and Humanities (CAH) acquires fine art from metropolitan artists and loans these works to District government agencies and offices for display in public areas in DC government buildings.

The Art Bank Collection started in 1986, which now has nearly 3,000 artworks. Many of these works are installed across 40 District government locations.

CAH and DC Public Library (DCPL) are pleased to present 17 pieces installed in the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Library as part of DCPL's inaugural participation in the long-standing Art Bank Loan Program. You can view CAH's entire Art Bank Collection and other collections online at dcarts.emuseum.com.

We hope that you take the opportunity to see these works by following this self-guided tour. To learn more about CAH, please visit our website www.dcarts.gov.

In addition to the Art Bank Collection, art installations from the library's collection and other local collections can be found throughout the building. We invite you to explore, discover, and enjoy all the art at the MLK Library.
